

JACKALS CAN AND DO MAKE MISTAKES!

JAKKALSE MAAK FOUTE

It is a known fact, not all jackals are clever, not all bright but many are clever but sometimes even the older clever scoundrels make mistakes, here is a perfect example.

Male Jackal of 8 years old; note the width of his shoulders and his ears – they are big!

Used a little food, jackal vocal bark and a fight to kill this alpha male of the area.

When we walked up to this dog on the ground, Deon my partner said “Dis n meneer die hoor!” This old boy made a huge mistake !!!

I firmly believe that to get optimum success we need to use sounds that are not played all over the Karoo and heard by all the jackal, so secret sounds work and the local top 20 hit parade hits bought at a CO-OP don't work anymore as jackal have heard them before and know its you, that's why you see eyes far away, and no more!

Another conclusion I believe in is COMBERNATIONS, by this I mean you must create a story line like a movie for a jackal, (jackal are pack animals) and like vocal sounds UNLIKE CATS - so, we need to create a story.

On this hunt I worked like this; My plan was to create a story as follows, (I USED TWO FOXPRO CALLERS) Food into the wind 80m and jackal vocal bark 20m / 30m with the wind - I played a food sound for 5 seconds and put it off from one minute, after this I again did the same, then I played a jackal bark and waited 2 minutes then a little food and immediately threw a jackal fight.

CONCLUSION;

This old boy was the main dude in that area for sure, and what he heard was – he heard an animal in distress and then a jackal barking close by, then food and then he heard a few jackal fighting over that animal in distress and he got very pissed of knowing they are in his area and stealing his food kind of logic, and he came right on in, no doubt - the combos work well, just remember to have patience, one male on this hunt took me 40 minutes to call in.

He got the wind all wrong as the various sounds confused him and that fighting in his area really pissed him off and he forgot to go by his nose, and this cost him his life.

He came in at a mean speed crossed two sand roads, and approached the caller, 10m away he stopped and we killed him. The manner in which he ran you could see he was coming in to kick those other jackals' asses out of his area. After a hunt you go over things in your mind, and this thing of a combination with two sounds at various places works, over two nights we killed 12 jackal, NONE of them came in from the correct direction!

Here is a layout plan of the hunt in general terms;

RESPONSE TIME ON THIS HUNT WAS 15 MINUTES

This old alpha male of the area because of his aggressive, pissed off attitude he came in here all wrong and the combination I created made him confused -- he got it all wrong....

NOTE; I place the two calls on opposite sides of the road, this gives me a large area that is covered. The food, together with the jackal bark and then a fight made him mighty angry. I called in two males this same way this night; however the one took 40 minutes.
